Aqua Expeditions makes global push

LUXURY river cruise line Aqua Expeditions has announced it will increase its fleet by 150% over the next two years as part of a major expansion campaign.

A large cash injection from US-based Bison Capital Funds has made the growth plan possible, stumping up $28 million to facilitate ship purchases.

“I am thrilled that after a decade of changing the face of river cruising on both the Amazon and the Mekong Rivers we will extend our footprint to coastal cruising in additional soft adventure destinations,” said Aqua Expeditions Chief Executive Officer Francesco Galli Zugaro.

The Singapore-headquartered cruise line specialises in 5-star luxury river cruising in remote areas, with the same model of “lavishness” with “adventure” flagged to feature throughout the company’s expanded fleet and future itineraries.

“We succeeded in...introducing intimate and luxurious boats from which travellers take safari-like excursions led by expert guides to discover jungles, wildlife and local cultures,” Zugaro said.

“On board there is not only a staff-guest ratio of 1:1, but also ground-breaking cuisine overseen by internationally renowned celebrity chefs,” he added.

The first details of new vessels and itineraries will be announced later this month.

Supporting Fijian women

CAPTAIN Cook Cruises Fiji has partnered with Kiwi Air hostess Cassy Appleton and Fijian local Maraia Vavaitamana in an effort to deliver over 1,000 bras to Fijian women in the Mamanuca Islands.

The campaign, which was launched by Appleton after a visit to the region, invited women to donate their bras after she discovered many women in the remote rural areas were not always able to easily purchase or have access to bras.

Captain Cook Cruises Fiji helped distribute the bras to the women in the villages of Yanuya and Yalobi when they stopped off at the islands.

EVERYBODY loves a good maritime mystery, right?

Well the small fishing village of Cape Breton Island located in the Canadian province of Nova Scotia is currently abound with theories about a missing sailor after his vessel was found washed up on rocks by locals.

Several residents believe they spotted the shipwrecked sailor, accompanied by his dog, walking up the highway, but he hasn't been seen since.

"I just saw this guy with a backpack — I don't see many people walking by — and I noticed he had a dog with him with a red jacket on it," Marie Jaarsma told a clearly uninspired local media.

Another local man, Mark MacGillivray, who has taken time out of his schedule to examine the wreck said it was odd the unidentified sailor didn't ask for help.

"It's funny he wouldn't at least knock on someone's door and ask for a glass of water," a perplexed MacGillivray said.

Perhaps the man was simply trying to avoid a barrage of questions from stickybeaks?

Cultural Connections

WE HAVE exceptional opportunities in our many ports around Australia to illustrate that our country is exciting, diverse and offers experiences that cruise pax can't find anywhere else.

Indigenous touring and cultural activities are standout examples of how we will ensure that our regional ports in particular remain on cruise ship itineraries.

Last week a group of ACA members including Renata Lowe (Tourism WA), Chris White (Visit Victoria), Toby Biddick (A&K) and myself along with Bart Pigram — Narlijia Cultural Tours, who partnered with us on our Broome conference, were fortunate to attend the Indigenous Tourism Conference in Lorne, Victoria.

Bart presented a compelling presentation on how he is adapting his tours to cruise pax giving them an authentic insight into the history and culture in Broome seen through his eyes as a saltwater man.

Bart began his company three years ago and emphasises how important it is to continue to reinvent the experience to ensure it stays fresh and consistent.

His tours are filled with interesting first person stories and incorporate one-off experiences such as musical performances by Bart and his family members and the opportunity for cruise passengers to try the famous Nanna Pig's fish soup.

With over 30% of the 109 new ships currently on order being smaller luxury and expedition vessels, I predict that regional ports like Broome, Cairns and others around the country offering these cultural experiences will continue to see increased visitation and remain a must-see on cruise itineraries.
