Cruise Weekly today

Cruise Weekly today features five pages of all the latest cruise industry news.

Star Clippers brox

NEW routes and port calls for Star Clippers all feature in the line's Summer 2021 preview brochure, such as the three lesser known Greek Islands of Chalki, Kastellorizo and Symi.

The barquentine cruise line will also pay visit to Fethiye in Turkey, with all four new ports included in Royal Clipper's roundtrip sailings from Athens in Jul 2021.

For the remainder of the summer, Royal Clipper will sail to Mediterranean destinations such as Corsica, Croatia, Italy, Montenegro and Slovenia, as well as beaches and harbours along the French Riviera.

Sun sets on Pacific Dawn and Aria

P&O Cruises Australia yesterday revealed Pacific Encounter would be the name of its next 3,000-guest ship, to join the fleet in 2021, when it will also be bidding farewell to Pacific Aria and Pacific Dawn (pictured).

The fleet update is part of the cruise line's previously announced strategy of ship replacement, with Dawn and Aria departing in Feb and Apr 2021 respectively.

Pacific Aria cruises from A114 onwards have been cancelled, while Pacific Dawn sailings from W106 have also been called off, with guests having access to a full refund or rebooking.

"When we embarked on this transformation two years ago, we committed to refresh the fleet over time and to set the brand up for continued success...we have a clear picture of the P&O fleet of the future and it is a very exciting prospect with the brand well positioned to continue to lead in this dynamic market," said Carnival Australia and P&O Cruises Australia President Sture Myrmell.

"P&O's Pacific Adventure will be introduced with the our distinctive look and feel along with some new onboard features that means P&O Cruises remains the driving force for cruising in Australia and New Zealand."

The cruise line is also giving guests the opportunity to sail on Dawn and Aria's final cruises, with three options aboard each ship to go on sale from 03 Dec.

CroisiEurope ocean ship under repair

PASSNGERS aboard CroisiEurope's 120-passenger La Belle des Oceans have been taken off the vessel in Phuket, Thailand while the ship undergoes repairs after reportedly damaging its hull on an "uncharted rock" in the Andaman Sea near Phi Phi Island.

The ship, acquired by CroisiEurope earlier this year after previously sailing as Silversea's Silver Discoverer, is expected to be offline for about a week following the hull-breaching incident.

La Belle des Oceans managed to refloat by its own means and reached Phuket under its own power, with the close supervision of the Thai navy.

The ship, which has also formerly sailed as Clipper Odyssey, was en route from Penang to Phang Nga Bay.

No passengers were injured during the incident.

Smeralda aces tests

COSTA Smeralda has passed its liquefied natural gas (LNG) propulsion tests.

The new Costa Cruises flagship is the second cruise ship in the world to use the fuel both in port and at sea after fellow Carnival Corporation brand AIDA Cruise's AIDAnova.

"The fuelling of cruise ships with LNG is an innovation in which we were the first to believe five years ago, when we ordered the Costa Smeralda, setting an example for the sector, which has since been followed by other companies," said Costa Cruises President Neil Palomba.

"It is a safe and reliable technology, which is currently the most effective and feasible solution to ensure a significant reduction in the environmental impact of cruise ships in port and at sea."

Costa Smeralda's first cruise will depart Savona on 21 Dec.

Hungry for Oasis adventure?

ROYAL Caribbean's game-changing Oasis of the Seas has just undergone a US$165-million upgrade which has added a range of new features to what was the world's largest vessel when it launched in 2009.

Additions include "The Ultimate Abyss" (pictured), a massive 10-storey waterslide, along with an all-new pool deck and a refreshed adults-only Solarium area.

Dining options have also been expanded, with the addition of the Portside BBQ restaurant along with a Bionic Bar with robotic bartenders, ice-cream at Sugar Beach and El Loco Fresh, with Mexican street food.

"To see a 63-day $165 million effort come to life on a ship as iconic as Oasis of the Seas is remarkable," said Royal Caribbean International President & CEO, Michael Bayley.

CRUISE Croatia recently hosted 18 agents from around Australia on an eight-day cruise aboard the new deluxe MS Bella to experience cruising Croatia's coastline first-hand.

The famil was arranged to educate agents on the variety of deluxe vessels in Croatia now available to the Australian market.

Round-tripping from Split, the cruise visited ports such as Bol, Hvar, Korcula, Dubrovnik, Mljet, Omis and Puscica, and included plenty of time for activities on the boat, such as sunrise yoga on the sundeck, and going for a dip in the Adriatic Sea.

Beyond Travel Chief Operating

Officer Tony Gattari expressed how impressed he was with the enthusiasm and success of the famil, and announced the company would charter another ship in Apr 2020 to host Australian agents.

"This activity has proven highly successful, with many travel agents securing land and charter bookings for groups for the 2020 and 2021 season on their return," he said.

"This has affirmed our belief that we need to continually educate agents on our destinations and products".

Cruise Croatia also recently released its 2020 brochure (CW 18 Sep).

Wellington spill

ENVIRONMENTAL

protection authorities responded quickly to an incident in Wellington Harbour yesterday in which about 100 litres of fuel spilled during the refuelling of Royal Caribbean's Radiance of the Seas.

According to the Dominion Post, the diesel leaked out of shore-based pipe work, with "quite a bit" finding its way to the water, said Harbour Master Grant Nalder.

Tugs were brought in to help agitate the water and break up the diesel, with the public asked to be on the look out for any penguins which may have been affected.

DON'T stop reading dear CW consumers, but it's another message in a bottle porthole.

This tale sees the concealed communicate cross two oceans to land on a beach in Brown Bay, SA, where a local man stumbled across an old Gatorade bottle containing a freezer bag, which in turn held four pages of Spanish dated 05 Mar 2017.

After consulting Google Translate, the man uncovered an e-mail address, which he messaged, receiving a reply around 36 hours later, from a man in Comodoro Rivadavia, Argentina.

We promise, no more of these for the rest of the year!

Harvey on Coral

AUSTRALIAN country music singer Adam Harvey (pictured) will venture aboard Coral Princess in Apr, exploring New York, Central America and the Panama Canal.

The tour will begin with two nights in New York City and Miami before embarking aboard Coral for a fully escorted 15-night cruise to Puerto Vallarta, Huatulco, San Juan del Sur, Puntarenas, Panama City, and Cartagena.

On the cruise, Harvey will perform a range of musical interludes, featuring local Central American and Mexican acts.

The cruise sails from $8,999 ppts - call 1800 630 343 for more.

Carnival's Kulture

CARNIVAL has become the first cruise line to be certified "sensory inclusive" by disability nonprofit KultureCity, with Conquest, Horizon, Magic, Sensation, Sunrise and Victory all achieving the certification.

The rest of the fleet will be given the tick in Mar, with all Carnival staff aboard certified ships having been trained to understand sensory need.

No joy on Joy

SIX people aboard Norwegian Joy have been treated for flu-like symptoms after the ship docked in Los Angeles, returning from its Panama Canal sailing.

According to CNN, the ship docked around 6am Los Angeles time, with four of the six taken to hospital.

"During Norwegian Joy's Panama Canal sailing, a few guests on board experienced a stomach related illness," the cruise line told CNN in a statement.

"To mitigate any impact of this rare occurrence, we implemented stringent sanitation procedures."

Joy will homeport in New York City in 2020 and 2021.
