RCI Malaysia return

CELEBRATORY events were held on board Royal Caribbean International's (RCI) Spectrum of the Seas last week at Port Klang and Penang, in recognition of cruise tourism being given a new lease of life in Malaysia.

In both cities, senior dignitaries and state officials witnessed plaque and key exchanges between Spectrum's Captain and the ports' senior executives, who were given a tour of the ship.

"We are thrilled to herald the return of ports-of-call cruising within the region, and to connect holidaymakers with Asia's beautiful destinations once again," said RCI Vice President & Managing Director Asia Pacific Angie Stephen.

Added Port Klang Cruise Terminal (PKCT) Chair Shah Mohd Yusof: "we believe that the arrival of cruise ships to Port Klang, carrying local and international passengers to enjoy restaurants, attractions and shopping malls around the state of Selangor and Kuala Lumpur will greatly support Malaysia's tourism industry and economy.

"We have introduced a new attraction for passengers 'Cruise Day Fiesta' at the PKCT terminal building - in conjunction with Tourism Selangor featuring local cuisine and handicraft.

"PKCT is ready to welcome cruise liners to our world-class terminal."

A FARMER and the police have teamed up to rescue a man from his sinking boat in Wilson Inlet.

The man's vessel overturned near Denmark, but he managed to make a ooo call to authorities, alerting them his dingy was sinking and he urgently needed help.

The rescue was not easy, but luckily enough, a heroic farmer lent his vessel to the police, and sailed out to the man's rescue.

The man was then taken back to the farm, where he was medically assessed by St John.

"[The farmer] was straight into action," Denmark Police Acting Sergeant Chris Macaulay said.

"We just really appreciate the work that he's done for us today."

Coral's maiden Newcastle call

THE arrival of Princess Cruises' Coral Princess (pictured) on her maiden voyage to Newcastle yesterday signalled the return of cruising to the mouth of the Hunter River.

The arrival into Newcastle also marked the start of the city's 2022/23 season, which includes a total of 11 scheduled visits and an estimated 17,000 passengers.

Port of Newcastle Executive Manager Marine & Operations Glen Hayward told Cruise Lines International Association's local Managing Director Joel Katz in a LinkedIn post it was wonderful to welcome cruise ships back to the city.

"After two long years, it's great to be able to once again facilitate their visits given the important economic benefits they have for the region and the community," he said.

Port Authority of NSW Cruise Development Manager Natalie Godward reported Coral's 1,309 passengers disembarked the ship to enjoy their day in Newcastle and around the region, "all of them returning to the ship with a smile."

Senior Manager Corporate Affairs for Port of Newcastle Lucas Coleman also presented Coral Captain Dariusz Balana a "maiden voyage plaque" for the ship's first visit to the city.
