Sylvia Earle inaugural season drops

AURORA Expeditions has announced Sylvia Earle's (render pictured) maiden voyage, and her christening by the ship's namesake marine biologist.

Sylvia Earle will make her debut voyage on the Subantarctic Safari cruise to South Georgia and the Falkland Islands, embarking on 04 Nov, prior to which the National Geographic explorer-in-residence will christen her eponymous ship.

The 17-day maiden voyage will appeal to "wildlife lovers and history buffs alike", as it sails from Santiago to Ushuaia.

Guests will explore the history-steeped Falklands, a bird lover's paradise, home to an incredible diversity of penguin species, and the largest colony of black-browed albatross in the world.

This will be followed by South Georgia, which is known for its King penguin colonies and beaches lined with Elephant and Antarctic fur seals.

Following her maiden voyage, Sylvia Earle will continue her inaugural season on several voyages to Antarctica, followed by Costa Rica, the Arctic Archipelago, Norway, Greenland, Iceland, Ireland, and Scotland.

Aurora's activity program and focus on active adventure will continue to play a major part in the expedition experience aboard Sylvia Earle, with sea kayaking, scuba diving, polar snorkelling, alpine trekking, and more.

"We are thrilled to confirm the inaugural season of the Sylvia Earle, and to be debuting her on such a magnificent voyage whose destinations are so representative of Aurora's spirit of exploration, discovery and education," commented Chief Marketing Officer Hayley Peacock-Gower.

"This highly anticipated vessel is intended to be a floating ambassador for the conservation of the planet, with a large focus on marine education and conservation".

THE archipelagic country of Maldives is planning to reclaim land from the ocean in a bid to reverse its sinking effects.

However, the plan to dredge millions of tonnes of sand to create more land is controversial, with fears it could "choke" the local ecosystem.

The plan would also have the effect of creating land for the tourism industry, with the Maldives able to sell the newfound terra firma to the resorts sector.

The low-lying nation is one of the world's most vulnerable to climate change.

Oceania, MCA sign pact

OCEANIA Cruises has announced a new partnership with the Museum of Contemporary Art Australia (MCA), located on George Street in Sydney.

Marking the new partnership, Oceania will be a Supporting Partner of the MCA's major upcoming summer exhibition by South Korean sculptor Do Ho Suh as part of the 2022–23 Sydney International Art Series (SIAS).

Opening on 28 Oct, Do's exhibition will be curated by Bundanon Trust NSW Chief Executive Officer Rachel Kent, alongside MCA Associate Curator Megan Robson.

One of the artist's most comprehensive projects to date, the Sydney-exclusive exhibition brings together significant loans from public and private collections, alongside a major new sculptural work.

"We are delighted to announce our partnership with the Museum of Contemporary Art Australia, supporting the MCA's Sydney International Art Series," said Senior Vice President & Managing Director Asia Pacific Steve Odell.

"Many of our guests are art aficionados who like to immerse themselves in contemporary art and culture, so we see a genuine synergy between the two brands. "We look forward to supporting Do Ho Suh's inspired new collection for SIAS 2022."

Added new MCA Director Suzanne Cotter: "the MCA's vision is to make contemporary art and ideas widely accessible to a range of audiences, and we are excited to partner with Oceania Cruises, whose own passion for art and creating rich cultural experiences for its guests is a shared vision at the MCA."

Do is known for his work across various media, including paintings and film.
