TV CHEF Karen Martini and former international cricket player Brett Lee (pictured) will headline Cunard Line's Australianthemed voyages next year.

The two Aussie icons will set sail on Queen Elizabeth, with both seven-night voyages offering onboard talks & events, themed shore experiences, and a celebration of Australian culture through the lenses of food & sport.

Martini will headline the second edition of the Great Australian Culinary Voyage, with the inaugural itinerary having disembarked earlier this week.

While on board, Martini will take over Queen Elizabeth's premium dining venue, The Verandah Restaurant, for three exclusive fine dining events.

Martini's food will appear in the Britannia Restaurant with a selection of dishes offered throughout the sailing, and she will also speak in the Royal Court Theatre.

Martini will be joined by additional exciting gastronomic talent to be announced in the coming months.

Departing Melbourne on 05 Jan 2024, the Great Australian Culinary Voyage will see Queen Elizabeth chart a round trip itinerary to Adelaide and Hobart.

Meanwhile, Lee, recognised as one of the fastest bowlers in the world during his career, will spearhead the inaugural 'Voyage of Sporting Greats'.

While on board, Lee will regale guests with tales from his impressive career through insightful Q&A sessions and an exclusive activity, to be announced shortly.

Departing on 13 Feb 2024, Cunard's inaugural Voyage of Sporting Greats will sail a roundtrip from Sydney to Tasmania and back over seven nights, with calls in Hobart, Port Arthur, and Melbourne.

Lee will lead a line-up of Australian sports icons, with more talent to be announced shortly.

TRAINING ACADEM

A WORLD War I-era German U-boat has been found off the United States coast.

A team of divers recently made the discovery of a lifetime off the Virginia coast.

The submarine SM U-111 was commissioned by the Imperial German Navy in 1917 to aid in its war effort.

The U-boats were so effective they were destroyed by the Allies after the war.

Orion incident

A SMALL fire occurred in a guest stateroom on board Viking's Viking Orion while she was docked in Sydney on Fri.

The fire on deck 5 was extinguished within minutes by Orion's crew, alongside Fire & Rescue NSW, and there was no injuries or hospitalisations, although two passengers were assessed by paramedics.

As a precaution, decks 5 and 6 were evacuated, with the remainder of Orion maintaining normal operations.

Viking is investigating the incident, and early reports indicate the cause of the fire was electrical, possibly from a corded device.

All scheduled operations on board Orion have resumed, and Viking said it does not expect any disruption to the current voyage.

Come and meet the Vikings

VIKING has introduced more than 1,000 travel advisors across the region to its small ships this summer cruise season.

Advisors and their clients have inspected Viking Orion, Viking Mars, and Viking Neptune, as they have called Australian ports this summer.

During a one-hour hosted ship inspection, advisors are guided through the ship's public areas, including the seven indoor and outdoor dining venues, the Nordic Spa and fitness center, the pools, theatre and cinemas, the living room, the Explorers Lounge and several stateroom categories.

Advisors are also invited to join their host for a Q&A session over a beverage or meal in one of the onboard bars or dining areas.

"We know how critical it is for agents to be able to witness a product first-hand to provide their clients with the right information," local Managing Director Michelle Black said.

"We would love to get more agents cruising with Viking, but with full ships, these inspections provide a fantastic opportunity for agents to experience a taster
