

Fridtjof Nansen named in Svalbard

HURTIGRUTEN Expeditions' battery-hybrid powered Fridtjof Nansen (pictured) has been named in the world's northernmost naming ceremony for a passenger ship.

At latitude 78° north in Svalbard, the local community joined the celebrations of one of the world's greenest and most advanced cruise ships.

Replacing the traditional bottle of champagne with a chunk of ice, godmothers and environmental advocates Hilde Falun Strom and Sunniva Sorby named Fridtjof Nansen, continuing a Hurtigruten ritual invented by Norwegian explorer Roald Amundsen.

As the two crushed the ice against Fridtjof Nansen's bow, they quoted Amundsen's words from when he named Maud, a ship specifically built for his second expedition to the Arctic.

"It is not my intention to dishonor the glorious grape, but already now you shall get the taste of your real environment.

"For the ice you have been built, in the ice you shall stay most of your life, and in the ice, you shall solve your tasks," the pair said.

The traditional godmother gift was also replaced by a joint donation to Sorby and Strom's Hearts in the Ice project and Hurtigruten Foundation.

In honouring the cruise line's century-plus-long Svalbard heritage, Fridtjof Nansen is also the first cruise ship ever to be registered in Longyearbyen.

CANAL holidays in the United Kingdom were peaking pre-pandemic, but one of these narrowboats has recently served a different purpose.

The aptly named Piano Boat, currently moored just outside London in Uxbridge, recently served as a floating concert hall for classical performances.

Captain Masayuki Tayama, the house pianist of Piano Boat, told Reuters the vessel was the only one of its kind.

Tayama played a program including Ludwig van Beethoven and Robert Schumann to an enthusiastic audience in evening dress, seated around tables covered in white tablecloths.

The project's manager Rhiana Henderson said the idea came about when they were living on a narrowboat with a digital piano that was drawing interest from passersby, which has since developed into a number of fully booked holidays.

Great news for SA

GREAT news for South Australia last week as Coral Expeditions announced five new intrastate itineraries for Dec and Jan.

The voyages follow Coral's successful foray into SA earlier this year and are a great example of how domestic cruising can work to benefit both passengers and the state's tourism industry at a time when we are all looking for opportunities in this challenging environment.

Coral Expeditions is also operating in WA and Queensland although won't be allowed to enter some other states this year based on the current health advice which we would have hoped was universal.

Our organisation has been calling for consistent decision making between the states to allow for cruise lines to forward plan with confidence.

Unfortunately, this continues to fall on deaf ears.

This has also been the case at the national level where requests by CLIA to the federal government to make decisions on a rolling 30- or 60-day basis as opposed to 90-day exemptions have not been recognised.

As such, CLIA has launched the next phase of the Ready, Set, Sail campaign urging industry stakeholders to write to their local MPs and Ministers requesting further conversations around a cruise restart.

ACA continues to support this strategy.
