Cruise360's international intent

CRUISE Lines International Association's (CLIA) Cruise360 has announced a huge line-up of 10 international speakers, the most ever for the annual conference, to be held in Brisbane this year.

CLIA's line-up of speakers will include new Windstar Cruises Managing Director Helen Beck (pictured), Cunard Senior Vice President North America & Australia Liz Fettes; and Celebrity Cruises Vice President International Giles Hawke.

Also joining the conference will be Princess Cruises Director Deployment & Itinerary Planning Debbie Holbrook; Disney Cruise Line Vice President International Sales & Marketing Jeff van Langeveld; MSC Cruises & Explora Journeys Vice President International Sales Antonio Paradiso; and Swan Hellenic Expedition Operations Manager

Jane Wilson.

Returning to Australia will be Regent Seven Seas Cruises & Oceania Cruises Senior Vice President International & Consumer Sales Steve Odell, who recently relocated to Miami to take up his current role.

Also on the billing will be AmaWaterways co-founder, President Kristin Karst.

The event will also include CLIA President & Chief Executive Officer Bud Darr, who will deliver a keynote state-of-the-industry address (CW 25 Jun).

CLIA MD Joel Katz told CW this year's Cruise360 will provide an unprecedented opportunity to learn from industry experts from around the world.

"Cruise360 is an essential forum for our industry as we unite to discuss our strengths, challenges and future direction," he said.

"Never before have we had so many visiting speakers from other parts of the world, giving us a rare opportunity to consider our future in a global context and to learn from the overseas experience," Katz added.

Cruise360 returns to Brisbane next month for the second time in three years. MS

Some Xcel-ent news

CELEBRITY Cruises has pulled back the curtain on four new venues which will make their debut on board its upcoming ship Celebrity Xcel.

On the top deck, the new Celebrity Pool Club will feature a 'pool valet', which will manage and distribute chilled pool towels, card games, sunscreen and secure storage for personal items, along with VIP cabana rental services.

The last sea day of each Caribbean itinerary will see the space transformed with Caribbean music, pop-up game shows and pool activities.

"Celebrity Xcel will set sail with seven new elevated experiences that invite guests to escape their daily routine and make memories that will last a lifetime," President Laura Hodges Bethge said.

Xcel will also offer 'Attic at the Club', a 24/7 neon games room packed with nostalgic arcade games such as Pac-Man along with pool tables, darts, and a golf simulator.

Meanwhile, Xcel's day spa will debut the line's first Hydra Room, which will provide a water-based wellness service featuring a warm pool with massage jets, among 120 different treatments.

Also new on board will be Celebrity's first flagship retail store (pictured), which mixes an interactive exhibit showcasing the history of the line with a souvenir store.

The shopfront will feature a range of items that can be engraved, embroidered and printed to serve as a keepsake.

APT goes (very) early

APT'S 2027 pre-release European Collection is now on sale, available earlier than ever before due to high demand.

The tour operator's two recently introduced newbuild ships APT Solara (pictured) and APT Ostara return on the Rhine, Main, and Danube, with earlybird bookers able to save up to $2,200 per couple, with flights included.

APT's popular flagship 15-day 'Magnificent Europe' cruise will return this season, sailing between Amsterdam and Budapest, with prices starting at $8,895pp, including flights.

There is also an earlybird offer of up to $1,400 of savings per couple for this itinerary.

APT's Estrela also returns to Iberia's Douro, offering immersive cruising through one of the world's oldest wine regions.

The 11-day 'Douro Delights' cruise begins in Porto and concludes in Madrid.

Prices start at $8,095 per person, with an earlybird saving of up to $2,200 per couple.

APT's 2027 early release also includes its popular Croatia Yacht Cruising program aboard Lady Eleganza on her nine-day 'Croatian Island Discovery'.

The cruise explores lesserknown gems such as Rab, Pag and Hvar, alongside highlights such as Split, Dubrovnik, and Krka National Park, with prices starting at $8,195 per person.

APT is expected to continue to release its products to market sooner than ever, after Chief Executive Officer David Cox noted a further-than-usual booking curve (CW 30 May).

Cox, speaking exclusively to Cruise Weekly, said the trend would start with the just-released program, catering to the growing segment of passengers who want to lock in their holiday plans well in advance.

Offers are available until 03 Oct, or until sold out - CLICK HERE. MS

NCL play swapsies

NORWEGIAN Cruise Line (NCL) has opted to swap two ships between home ports from Nov 2026 to Mar 2027.

The cruise line's Norwegian Breakaway (pictured) and Norwegian Prima were set to operate from San Juan and New Orleans respectively (CW 08 Jul), with the former ship to now head to New Orleans, while Prima is bound for the Puerto Rican capital.

Itineraries are unchanged - with the swap meaning New Orleans will gain the larger of the two ships, with Breakaway able to hold 3,903 passengers.

All previously booked guests have been unbooked, and will receive a full refund of their cruise fare, as well as an additional 10% future cruise credit available for any published sailing.

A TRANSATLANTIC cruise typically takes around six nights, but one freshly unearthed message in a bottle recently took over a decade to complete the journey.

The bottle was launched by visitors to Bell island in Canada, and was recently found washed up on a beach on Ireland's Dingle Peninsula 13 years later.

The note from Sep 2012 was written by a couple named Brad and Anita, and described their day trip to Bell Island.

There was a phone number on the letter, but unfortunately, calls to it went unanswered.

However, the internet never sleeps, and after the bottle's new owner posted a photo of their find (pictured) to Facebook, the couple was tracked down - and they are still together to this day.

Ama's webinar

A WEBINAR is being hosted by AmaWaterways, during which a "very special announcement will be made".

Those who attend one of the webinars on 17 Jun will also go into the running to win a $100 gift card - register HERE.

Virtual voyaging with NCL

NORWEGIAN Cruise Line (NCL) is inviting travel advisors on a new "virtual voyage" to explore the brand's destinations through fun, interactive activities.

The virtual campaign, 'Experience More of the world with NCL', will launch from next week, and last six weeks, with advisors going into the draw to win a cruise next year.

Participants can unlock a new destination each week, and complete a short quiz to earn a virtual passport stamp.

Those who collect all six stamps to fill their virtual passport will be in the running for one of two Norwegian cruises.

Each quiz must be completed in its designated week to stay in the running, and every stamp counts.

The journey begins every Mon at 11:00am AEST with a short Facebook Live session hosted by Director of Sales Angela Middleton, where she will spotlight the featured destination and reveal a keyword.

Travel advisors can also receive up to 1,200 Partners First Rewards points throughout the campaign simply by entering the keyword into the bonus quiz question each week.

Mexico tax in place

MEXICO'S controversial in-transit cruise fee has gone live, with the US$5pp levy now being charged to cruise ships calling throughout the country. Initially proposed at US$42 per passenger late last year (CW 10 Dec), the charge was met with derision by the cruise industry, which said it would devastate cruise tourism and impact its coastal communities.

Threats to divert ships to other locations and suspend funding for cruise infrastructure later followed, before a compromise was reached, which saw the tax start at US$5.

It will gradually increase over coming years (CW 07 May).

Key to the compromise was a commitment by the cruise industry to spend more on Mexican products and produce.

The charge will double to US$10 next year, before hitting $21 per person in 2028.

Charting a greener course

IN A landmark moment for cruise innovation, Australian Cruise Association member Viking has announced the world's first hydrogen-powered cruise ship, the Viking Libra, set to debut in 2026.

Built in partnership with Fincantieri, this state-of-the-art vessel will operate with a hybrid propulsion system powered by liquefied hydrogen and advanced fuel cells, enabling zero-emission cruising even in some of the world's most environmentally sensitive destinations.

A second hydro-powered vessel, Viking Astrea, will follow in 2027. It's a clear example of how cruise lines are evolving, in line with the global sustainability goals highlighted in CLIA's 2025 State of the Cruise Industry Report.

Across technology, infrastructure, and operations, cruise lines are investing billions in cleaner propulsion systems, alternative fuels, shore power capabilities, digital optimisation and waste reduction strategies.

Viking's investment in sustainability, along with newbuild orders extending to 2033, demonstrates a strong long-term commitment to environmentally responsible cruising.

Importantly, it also reflects growing demand from travellers who want to explore the world more consciously.

a signal of what's to come
With hydrogen, shoreside
electricity, and fuel-flexible ships on the horizon, the cruise sector is proving itself to be a powerful innovator in cruising's journey to net zero.
