Editor's Letter

The guide was created as a handy tool for agents.

I have something to confess. It was not long ago that I was a cruise sceptic, before I became a busy working mum and the hamster wheel of juggling life and career crept up on me. In fact, I'll even admit that I was a bit of a travel control freak who liked to do my own research, unearth little-known destinations, organise my own holidays, and then not-so-humblebrag to everyone about the 'truly authentic' experiences I had.

Back then, the definition of a successful holiday for me was one that had a mix of these so-called IYKYK ('if-you-know-you-know') experiences and pure exhaustion, in a bid to jam in as much as I could into my time.

Now I'm older and quite frankly, I'm tired. Given the chaotic nature of the world these days, who isn't?

Enter cruising, with its promise of unpacking just once, personally delivered cocktails, onboard luxury spa treatments, gourmet culinary experiences, and especially in the case of river cruising, immersive itineraries that someone else has put together for you. It's a resort at sea and I am here for it.

I should also add that especially when it comes to river cruising, culturally immersive itineraries, adventure and discovery are now part and parcel of the offerings from many lines.

It seems that plenty of travellers around the world, beyond the stereotypical customer base of retirees, have finally embraced living their best life at sea, too. According to the Cruise Line International Association's State of the Industry report from this year, 37.2 million passengers sailed in 2025 and 90% intend to cruise again.

Global demand is surging ahead and to help travel agents, Cruise Weekly has partnered with CLIA to create this guide as the ultimate handbook for travel agents, a resource that they can continue returning to when they are selling to clients. It's jam-packed with the best cruise lines on offer and their unique experiences, with plenty of easy-to-use tables to help advisors compare and contrast the different products in the market.

Whether your clients are considering a cruise for their honeymoon or a solo adventure, across the Med or to Antarctica, we have you covered. I hope you enjoy discovering all the great ships sailing the seas right now and it proves to be a useful tool for you well into the future. ••

Sponsor's Letter

Travellers are loving off-the-beaten-path destinations.

There has never been a better time to be in travel, with opportunities presenting themselves across every part of the industry, and cruising enters this period with genuine momentum and the fundamentals to sustain it.

Passenger volumes have surpassed pre-pandemic levels. New product is entering service across ocean, river and expedition segments, and the traveller coming to cruising today is more considered, more informed and has higher expectations than at any point in the category's history.

We are seeing Australians continuing to choose to travel and they are choosing to travel well. Despite the noise of global uncertainty, the appetite for meaningful, well-crafted journeys has not softened. If anything, it has sharpened. Travellers who might once have hesitated are instead asking better questions: who do I trust with this journey, what is actually included, and will every detail be taken care of? Those are questions APT has proudly been answering for nearly 100 years.

The destinations driving that confidence are telling. Europe's rivers remain as compelling as ever - the grand cities, the unhurried pace, the sense of arriving somewhere rather than passing through. Canada and Alaska are drawing travellers who want scale and wilderness without sacrificing comfort. Vietnam and Cambodia continue to capture the imagination of guests seeking immersive, culturally rich experiences that feel genuinely off the beaten path.

For operators, this evolution carries both opportunity and obligation. A more discerning traveller raises the bar. What sustains a business across decades is not simply meeting expectations, it is the consistent capacity to exceed them. Five-star, all-inclusive journeys. Expert guides. Exceptional inclusions. No surprises, just pride in every detail.

At APT, we are about to enter our centenary year having made the most significant investment in new product in our history. New ships, new destinations, a business better placed for growth than at any point in our near-100-year story.

None of that growth happens without the travel advisors who champion this category every day. The partnerships we have built with the trade are long-term, and they are built on the same principle that guides everything we do: clarity, trust, and a product that is easy to recommend with confidence. When advisors know exactly what they are selling, and clients arrive knowing what to expect, everyone wins.

> "THE APPETITE FOR MEANINGFUL, WELL-CRAFTED JOURNEYS HAS NOT SOFTENED. IF ANYTHING, IT HAS SHARPENED."

For an industry with the depth and ambition to meet it, the outlook is very good indeed. ••

Cruiseabout adds stores

Cruiseabout is continuing to bolster its retail footprint to meet growing demand from Australians, with new stores in Indooroopilly, Qld; Doncaster, Vic; and Erina, Sydney, bringing the business' total retail footprint to 11.

The brand's GM Brad Kennedy said the growth reflects both opportunity and demand for those willing to seize it.

"It's hard to believe that in just three years we've managed to rebuild an entire brand and have 11 stores in almost every state, in addition to three incredibly successful remote teams," Kennedy said.

"Australians cannot get enough of cruising and, as such, there's ample opportunity for consultants to build a strong client base and a genuinely rewarding career.

"The demand is there - all we need are the right people in the right places to meet it."

Kennedy said the brand's model continues to prove its worth in a category where customers value personal guidance.

"Cruise is a considered purchase that is not only nuanced in itinerary but in cruise line, size of ship, level of luxury, inclusions and so much more. Because of this, customers want to talk to someone in person who knows the product inside out.

"Our stores give people that confidence, and our consultants the platform to build long-term relationships with their clients." •• MS

ACA and NZCA renew partnership

The Australian Cruise Association (ACA) and New Zealand Cruise Association (NZCA) have renewed their partnership to strengthen cruise in the Oceania region. The agreement formalises an ongoing partnership between the two peak industry bodies, recognising the importance of a coordinated regional approach in an increasingly competitive cruise sector.

Under the memorandum of understanding, ACA and NZCA will collaborate across key areas including regional promotion, industry intelligence sharing, engagement with cruise lines, and alignment on matters impacting the cruise sector.

The agreement also supports joint participation at major international industry events and strengthens communication and collaboration between the two organisations, ensuring a more coordinated approach to supporting cruise deployment and regional growth. •• MS

EUROPE'S LARGEST CRUISE TERMINAL OPENS

Europe's largest cruise terminal, the Las Palmas Cruise Port, has officially opened in Gran Canaria, Spain. An inauguration ceremony for the new port took place in Mar, bringing together local authorities and business leaders including Global Ports Holding (GPH) chairman Mehmet Kutman, Beatriz Calzada, president of the Port Authority of Las Palmas, and Francisco Grau, GPH's regional director West Med.

Operated by GPH, the terminal building spans 14,000 sqm across two levels and can accommodate up to four cruise ships simultaneously. The terminal is part of a larger €40 million investment to modernise cruise terminals across the Canary Islands, including those in Fuerteventura and Lanzarote.

All three developments have an emphasis on greater sustainability practices such as the use of recycled materials, responsible waste management and more prominent use of solar power.

According to GPH, cruise traffic across the three ports has grown from 1.4 million passengers in 2022 to over 2 million in 2025 and with the completion of the new terminals, "the ports are well positioned to unlock the next phase of cruise growth". •• JHM

TAHITI BETS ON CRUISING

Growth in the popularity of cruising French Polynesia has become so significant that it now accounts for 25% of its tourism revenue.

Tahiti Tourisme president Bud Gilroy said efforts to promote voyages had led to 30% of all visitors arriving by plane booking a sailing in the region.

"We've grown our cruise industry from 500 calls to 1,400 calls in just 10 years," Gilroy said. "For us, this is very important growth because it really helps to diversify our offering.

"This segment is the only transportation vector that can get so many tourists to so many remote islands - one ship can sometimes be the equivalent of six domestic flights."

Another key pillar of French Polynesia's cruise sector is to sustain cruise growth without impacting the local communities of its many tropical islands.

"Around 90% of our calls are ships with less than 500 passengers," Gilroy explained. "That's what I like about cruise, because it answers what the locals are looking for as well. Passengers on a cruise line are only there from 8am to 6pm, there's no pressure on accommodation or the resources on the islands".

French Polynesia only has one hard cruise limit in place at the popular Bora Bora, which is limited to 1,200 passengers a day. While the other islands do not have specific caps, Gilroy said the broader strategy is to limit visitation to smaller, environmentally-conscious cruise lines with no more than roughly 500 passengers per ship.

Gilroy added that in the longterm, this approach allows each island to "develop themselves" and take advantage of an industry that provides long-term visibility. •• AB

APT puts stake in Murray

APT Travel Group has recently acquired a majority stake in Murray River Paddlesteamers, deepening its investment in the Echuca-based operator of woodfired steam ships on the Murray River.

The acquisition strengthens APT's commitment to Australian domestic travel, bringing one of the country's most iconic inland waterways into a portfolio that already spans river and ocean cruising, as well as land touring.

Murray River Paddlesteamers operates three vessels from Echuca: the century-old Canberra, restored as a paddle steamer in 2003; Emmylou, used for both day and overnight cruises; and Australian Star, the country's first five-star paddlesteamer, which commenced sailing earlier this year. •• MS

NATIONAL ACTION PLAN NEEDED

A record 1.45 million Aussies enjoyed a cruise last year, but 17% more sailed outside the ANZ and South Pacific region compared to 2024, as Australia struggles to become a competitive cruising destination, according to new figures from the Cruise Lines International Association (CLIA). The organisation's Annual Source Market Report for 2025 also found that Australians who chose long-haul destinations over sailing locally increased from 18.5% in 2024 to 19.7% in 2025.

"The number of Australians cruising is at record levels, and with around 80 new ships coming online worldwide over the next decade, this passion can only rise," CLIA Executive Director in Australasia Joel Katz said.

"However, Australia is struggling to attract ships to our own waters because of regulatory uncertainties and rising costs, so we are becoming uncompetitive as a destination and losing tourism to other countries."

"Cruising contributes $7.32 billion a year to the national economy and supports more than 22,000 Australian jobs, so it's vital that we bring together federal, state and territory governments under a national action plan - so we can create greater regulatory certainty, restore Australia's competitiveness, and attract more cruise tourism," the organisation's chief explained.

Despite the challenges, CLIA's newly released report also found that 8% more Aussies sailed in the ANZ region last year compared to 2024. Australia, New Zealand and the South Pacific also remained the most popular cruising destination for Australians, where 80.3% sailed last year.

This was followed by the Mediterranean (6.3%), Asia (4.5%), Alaska (2.5%), the Caribbean (1.7), Northern Europe (1.3%), Hawaii and the US West Coast (0.7%), and South America/ Panama (0.4%). •• JHM

Awe is where advocacy begins

AMBER WILSON,
HX, DIRECTOR OF SALES

When we witness the extraordinary in the wild, we naturally begin to care more deeply about its future.

HX's ongoing research partnership with the University of Tasmania (UTAS) clearly shows that travel to remote wildernesses does not end when the journey does. It stays with people. Those who experience places like Antarctica are more likely to shift their behaviours, support conservation efforts, and advocate for environmental protection in their everyday lives.

"REAL EXPERIENCE BUILDS UNDERSTANDING AND UNDERSTANDING DRIVES ACTION."

At HX, we see this profound personal transformation firsthand on every voyage. Our goal is not to simply take guests to Antarctica, but to build meaningful connections between people and place. When guests encounter these remote environments up close, abstract concepts like climate change and biodiversity loss become tangible, personal, and urgent. Real experience builds understanding and understanding drives action.

Antarctica remains one of the last truly wild places on Earth, yet it is changing rapidly. The polar regions are currently warming at nearly four times the global average. From the sound of a glacier calving to the sight of wildlife adapting to shifting conditions, witnessing this reality firsthand creates a perspective that cannot be replicated. It is immersive, educational, and often life-changing.

Expedition cruising has a unique role to play here. As members of the International Association of Antarctica Tour Operators, we operate under strict environmental guidelines to ensure responsible travel.

But beyond simple protection, our focus is on education and engagement. Through our onboard science program and citizen science initiatives, guests move from observation to participation. They contribute to real research, from wildlife monitoring to ocean sampling, gaining direct insight into Antarctica's ecosystem.

Research by UTAS reinforces this impact. The university's social science team found that actively participating in citizen science led to measurable behavioural changes. Many guests returned home with a deeper understanding of Antarctica's fragility and a stronger commitment to conservation, with some even adjusting their future travel choices to reduce their environmental footprint. Active participation transforms passive sightseeing into active learning, fostering a strong sense of ambassadorship.

Guests may arrive expecting a journey that stays with them forever. What they leave with is something far more enduring: a deep, lifelong sense of responsibility.

Because awe, when truly felt, does not remain a fleeting emotion - it becomes action. In a world currently facing increasingly urgent environmental challenges, that shift from passive witness to active custodian has never been more important. ••

Princess' new Singapore home

Princess Cruises has deepened its strategic commitment to Singapore, expanding its deployment from two ships to three. The cruise line will position three ships in the city-state: Diamond Princess, Sapphire Princess, and Grand Princess, with its number of local sailings set to double by 2030.

More than 150,000 passengers are expected to sail from Singapore over the course of the partnership.

The news follows a three-year partnership between the line and the Singapore Tourism Board, which has worked recently with several brands in the sector to increase its share of the Asian cruise market. ••

Cruising overseas

Travel Associates has announced its Cruise Boutique concept will expand internationally for the first time, with the launch of its first store in New Zealand. The location will be led by local Flight Centre Travel Group team leaders Simon Matthews and Tania Paull, head of luxury brands NZ, Kelly de Graaf, announced on LinkedIn.

Cruise Boutique's overseas launch comes as cruise demand continues to surge, de Graaf said.

"This is a fantastic opportunity to bring together some of the industry's most passionate cruise specialists to deliver expert, personalised advice across every style of cruising; from contemporary and premium through to luxury, expedition and river cruising," she said.

There are currently nine Cruise Boutique Travel Associates stores. ••

Sailing towards new opportunities

As the global cruise industry enters a new phase of growth driven by record demand and investment, travel professionals who understand the evolving landscape stand to benefit the most.

BY JOEL KATZ

The global cruise industry is sailing into a remarkable era of growth, innovation and global appeal - and for travel advisors, the opportunities have rarely looked stronger.

Worldwide, cruise passenger numbers set a new record of 37 million last year, and CLIA's latest forecasts show we can expect figures to reach beyond 42 million by the end of the decade.

At the same time, cruise lines are investing heavily in spectacular new ships, new experiences, and new onboard innovations. Around 80 new ships are set for construction over the next ten years, representing more than A$100 billion in investment.

For the trade, this investment signals more than just industry optimism - it points to expanding sales opportunities across every segment of the market.

Our surveys show the intention to cruise among Australians is among the highest ever seen. More new-to-cruise guests are heading to sea and new generations are entering the market.

The average age of Australian cruise guests has fallen to 47.3, down from 50.4 in 2019, and more than a third of cruisers are now aged under 40. Millennials are increasingly among the most likely to book a cruise, attracted by cruising's value for money, social atmosphere and ability to visit multiple destinations.

Another major trend is the rise of fly-cruise holidays. While Australians have long embraced local cruising, demand for long-haul cruising is accelerating. Fly-cruise itineraries now account for almost 20% of Australian cruise bookings, particularly in the Mediterranean, Asia, and Alaska. For advisors, this presents significant scope to package cruises with air, pre- and post-accommodation, touring and premium land experiences.

> "THE INTENTION TO CRUISE AMONG AUSTRALIANS IS AMONG THE HIGHEST EVER SEEN."

Expedition cruising is also becoming one of the industry's standout success stories. Passenger numbers in the expedition sector grew by 22% last year, driven by rising demand for once-in-a-lifetime travel experiences.

Closer to home, regional Australia is emerging as another area to watch. Cruise lines are increasingly deploying ships into destinations across South Australia, Western Australia, Tasmania and the Northern Territory, with strong interest in immersive experiences and Indigenous tourism. The Kimberley, in particular, is one of the world's great emerging destinations.

Meanwhile, river cruising is evolving rapidly. New ships, new destinations and more diverse experiences are broadening its appeal across Europe, Asia and beyond. We're seeing considerable investment in new ships, together with new entrants to the market.

A similar area of evolution is in luxury cruising, where magnificent new ships and new cruise operators are gaining attention. Given its huge growth and a rapidly expanding luxury fleet, this is a space that presents great opportunity for consultants catering to high-value clients.

CLIA's education programs are focused on helping travel advisors understand these evolving areas of cruising, and the following pages will help present a picture of the cruise lines driving our future.

Cruising is no longer a single category, but a diverse range of experiences catering to every type of traveller. As demand continues to surge, advisors who understand the evolving cruise landscape will be the best placed to capitalise on one of travel's most exciting sectors. ••

2026 Cruise GUIDE

RIVER CRUISING

River cruising has become one of the most dynamic sectors in travel, fuelled by rising consumer demand and a wave of industry innovation.

BY JO-ANNE HUI-MILLER

"RIVER CRUISING IS A BEAUTIFUL WAY TO TRAVEL - IT'S RELAXING AND STRESS-FREE."

One of the most exciting spaces in cruising right now lies in the rivers, driven by a surge in consumer demand, innovation and new experiences from the industry.

In 10 years' time, it is also predicted that the global river cruise industry will grow 11.2%, reaching a value of $12.6 billion, according to Future Market Insights.

"New ships, new itineraries and a wealth of new experiences have made river cruising one of the most innovative areas in travel. It's no longer a niche alternative to ocean cruising or coach touring, but an exciting area of travel in its own right," CLIA executive director for Australasia Joel Katz said.

This growth in river cruising coincides with the increased desire from consumers for slow, immersive travel and the ability to explore destinations on a deeper level.

"I think the recent surge in interest in river cruising is mainly due to the growing popularity of cruising overall. Many people who have enjoyed ocean cruises are now looking for a different experience," observed travel agent Jane Fowler from TravelManagers.

"River cruises offer a more relaxed pace and flexible itineraries, with frequent stops that allow guests to explore a variety of destinations in-depth. It's a great way for travellers to experience local culture and scenery, which is something that really appeals to a lot of people."

In the past couple of years, the river cruise industry has seen a succession of announcements, such as the news of lines like Viking, Scenic and Uniworld expanding their fleets over the next few years.

Meanwhile, the river cruise competitive landscape is heating up, with new players entering the market. Think Celebrity, Trafalgar, Aman, and Hotel Mandarin Oriental.

New destinations are also being explored beyond Europe, with India and Egypt experiencing a rising interest from lines offering purpose-built ships and new itineraries and experiences.

"River cruising is a beautiful way to travel - it's relaxing and stress-free, it represents great value, and it allows you to explore a lot of spectacular scenery and multiple destinations with ease," said Katz.

"It allows you the freedom to do as much or as little as you choose - to explore the great cities or out-of-the-way villages with ease, in a smaller group or on your own," he added. ••

OCEAN CRUISING

Far from the stereotype of offering family-friendly cheap holidays, this sector of the cruise market is now being driven by innovation and developing increasingly sophisticated product for everyone.

BY MYLES STEDMAN

"THIS SECTOR PRODUCES SOME OF THE MOST INNOVATIVE CRUISE PRODUCT AVAILABLE."

Over the past decade, ocean cruising has grown from an oft-misunderstood corner of the travel industry into one of the world's core drivers of leisure tourism. Cruise lines that once resembled slightly different versions of each other have now evolved to cater to a specific niche valued by their guests, particularly in the contemporary market.

The battle for the hearts and travel wallets of families has seen some of the world's biggest cruise lines evolve from a cheap and easy vacation into a full-service holiday experience: Carnival Cruise Line offering something for every member of the family, Norwegian Cruise Line introducing go-karts and hybrid coaster-waterslides, and Royal Caribbean expanding its private island experiences.

The nuance introduced to the ocean cruising sector has also seen some lines push upward to bridge the gap between contemporary and luxury brands. A number of cruise lines have emerged as a pioneer of premium-level sailing, offering an onboard atmosphere with a more refined and laidback feel than mainstream mega-ships.

This sector produces some of the most innovative cruise product available, such as Celebrity Cruises' three-storey Eden space and the shapeshifting Bazaar. Meanwhile, Princess Cruises' pioneering Sphere-class includes The Dome, a multi-level covered deck with the first fully glazed dome ever built on a cruise ship, while Holland America Line spotlights longer, more immersive itineraries.

Cruise Lines International Association executive director Joel Katz described Australians as some of the world's most passionate cruisers.

"We continue to sail in record numbers - 1.45 million of us sailed last year, a 9.5% increase on the previous years," he said.

"Globally, we're seeing an enormous amount of investment and innovation among cruise lines, which means there are new ships, new experiences and different styles of cruising to choose from.

"The variety of cruise choices is greater than ever, and cruise lines now cater to a much broader range of travellers with different interests and tastes. With more than 80 new ships on order from the world's shipyards - worth more than A$100 billion combined - the opportunities in cruising can only grow." ••

EXPEDITION CRUISING

No longer do expedition travellers need to choose between comfort and exploring remote parts of the world - modern cruise lines are now developing both sustainable and sophisticated vessels for today's passengers.

BY MYLES STEDMAN

"MODERN EXPEDITION VESSELS NOW COMBINE GENUINE EXPLORATION WITH AN INCREDIBLY SOPHISTICATED ONBOARD EXPERIENCE."

This past decade has seen expedition cruising push the boundaries like few other sectors of the cruise industry. Reflecting the pristine parts of the globe they visit, expedition lines have been some of the foremost leaders in sustainability in cruising.

HX Expeditions' Roald Amundsen introduced hybrid battery power to reduce emissions and fuel consumption, while cruise lines like Viking and Ponant have introduced onboard science labs. The sector is not done evolving, though, with the introduction of Hurtigruten's Sea Zero project, due by the end of the decade, set to operate entirely emission-free along the Norwegian coast.

According to CLIA MD Joel Katz, the number of expedition guests has also doubled over the past three years, as the world's expedition fleet is set to expand within the next 10 years, increasing capacity by 150%.

The face the expedition sector presents to travellers has changed, too, with high-end brands such as Seabourn Cruise Line and Silversea entering the sector. This has seen the rise of the luxury expedition, leading more well-heeled travellers into the space.

Luxury expedition cruising has also seen the vessels deployed by the sector - once the most pragmatic and utilitarian part of the voyage - evolve into an arms race, producing some of the most architecturally and technically advanced ships sailing the oceans, such as Scenic Luxury Cruises & Tours' Scenic Eclipse and Scenic Eclipse II 'Discovery Yachts'. The Australian brand is set to push the envelope even further in 2028 with the launch of Scenic Ikon.

"Ten to 15 years ago, expedition travel was very much about the destination over the experience onboard," explained Ivona Siniarska, MD of travel agency Take Off Go.

"Travellers accepted that if they wanted to reach these remote places, comfort and luxury would often be sacrificed. Today, that has changed dramatically. Modern expedition vessels now combine genuine exploration with an incredibly sophisticated onboard experience."

Despite the mass of changes in the sector, Siniarska believes one core principle remains.

"While the ships themselves have become more refined, the essence of expedition travel remains the same - access to places that feel wild, remote, and deeply humbling." ••

HX EXPEDITIONS

EXPEDITION

SINCE 1896, HX EXPEDITIONS HAS led voyages into the world's most extraordinary places — from the ice-carved edges of Antarctica to the wildlife-rich shores of the Galápagos.

The number one expedition operator in both the Arctic and Antarctic, HX's fleet of purpose-built ships takes travellers deeper into nature than most will ever go, guided by onboard scientists, naturalists, and polar experts who turn each journey into a living education.

It is the encounters that stay with you longest — a humpback whale surfacing at dawn, glaciers cracking into silence, and in some of the most remote places on Earth, the communities whose lives are shaped entirely by the wild around them.

HX offers more than travel. It offers a shift in perspective — the kind that stays with travellers long after they return home. With 130 years of boots-on-the-ice expertise, HX remains the clear choice for those ready to explore the world's great wild places.

Expeditions span Antarctica, the Arctic and North America's Great Lakes, where guests encounter dramatic landscapes, wildlife and pristine natural settings.

With a fleet of Zodiacs, kayaks and submarines, alongside expert-led excursions, guests can experience these regions up close. On board, experiences deepen with lectures and the dedicated Science Lab, where guests can engage directly with working scientists.

LUXURY CRUISING

Once defined by traditional elegance and older clients, luxury cruising has evolved into a vibrant, fast-growing sector offering everything from ultra-luxury hospitality to adventure.

BY MYLES STEDMAN

THE GLOBAL LUXURY CRUISE FLEET HAS MORE THAN TRIPLED IN SIZE SINCE 2010.

There is no sector of the cruise industry that has changed more in recent years than the luxury segment.

Once evoking imagery of grey-haired Baby Boomers being served by white-gloved butlers, the space has now evolved into a broad range of experiences catering to a far more diverse range of luxury travel styles.

As described by Ponant Explorations deputy chief executive officer Belinda Hindmarsh, the segment is splitting more cleanly between 'floating luxury hospitality' and 'experiential exploration travel'.

"It's bringing challenges to all of us to raise our standards in terms of what our hospitality on board looks like, and it's also opening up new markets for us, new potential customers who are coming to cruise for the first time," she said.

Ponant, which has traditionally operated luxury cruises in Europe and the Mediterranean, broke ground in 2021 with the arrival of Le Commandant-Charcot, the first-ever luxury icebreaker, which visits some of the most extreme places on earth.

Meanwhile, the luxury expedition industry now represents one of the fastest-growing niches in travel, served by other iconic vessels such as Scenic Luxury Cruises' Scenic Eclipse and Quark Expeditions' Ultramarine - some of the greatest luxury cruise experiences available today.

However, this does not mean there is no space for a traditional luxury cruise experience. Brands like Regent Seven Seas Cruises, Seabourn Cruise Line, and Silversea continue to push the envelope, defining the premium end of the market with all-suite, fully inclusive, low guest-to-crew ratio cruising.

Of course, a number of luxury hotel brands have also recently joined the sector and introduced their own flagship cruise experience, such as Ritz-Carlton, Four Seasons, and Aman, bringing their own personalities (and guests) to the luxury cruise category.

Cruise Lines International Association managing director Joel Katz believes the luxury market is one of the strongest areas of growth in cruising right now, with huge opportunities for agents.

"The global luxury cruise fleet has more than tripled in size since 2010, and the number of people choosing luxury cruise lines is forecast to grow more than 20% over the next three years, as new and more spectacular ships come online," he said.

"We're seeing a huge amount of innovation and investment by established cruise lines, as well as significant new players entering the luxury cruise space." ••
